

The Ring Committee of any class at Virginia Tech has some very difficult tasks. After carefully considering which jeweler to work with, the committee must begin to identify and then incorporate into the rings the many different manifestations of college life, Tech traditions, and more specifically, the meaning and significance of the Class of 1987. The design of such a selection of rings is the result of our talented Ring Design Committee.

The first job of the 1987 class officers was to select six people to work with the President, Cadet Member-at-large, Male Member-at-large, and Female Member-at-large on the Ring Design Committee. With the input of all the class officers, we were able to select a committee we knew would work well. However, even more importantly we chose a committee that contains a variety of opinions, ideas, and views of the class. This diversity is what makes the 1987 ring selection so successful. The newly formed committee's first job was to select a ring company after presentations from both Josten's and Balfour. Each company worked hard to win the contract and each pointed out ideas that would help the committee to design a better ring. In the end the personalities, design proposals, and marketing ideas of Balfour blended best with the committee members.

The members of the committee have maintained a close working relationship with the Balfour Company and this has enabled us to produce a unique ring collection we hope the Class of 1987 will cherish forever. I know these rings will provide me with memories of my years here at Virginia Tech.

and as your class President I want you to be as happy with your ring as I will be with mine, because the bottom line is, we created them for

The Ring Chairman Speaks

The enduring task of designing a ring collection each year is steeped in tradition. Ever since the first class ring was designed for the Class of 1914, a select group of students has had the arduous job of redesigning the rings for their respective class.

Since February the Ring Committee has been searching for that unique design that would unite us as a class while keeping our ties with the past classes at Virginia Tech. We feel that after having worked long hours we have accomplished this

This year we are offering a greater selection of rings than have previously been offered and have been able to come up with some very attractive design ideas. We have been able to capture the Ring History of Virginia Tech on these rings to produce a collection that we hope you will find traditional yet exciting.

The 10 appointed and selected members of the Ring Committee along with the LG

Balfour Company have worked hard to design a ring that you will be proud to wear for years to come. Remember, TOGETHER WE'RE BETTER - THE CLASS OF '87 and BALFOUR!

Class Logo

The class logo serves as a symbolic representation of the Class of 1987. The Ring Committee designed a logo that would appropriately reflect the values the class members. The torch in the center of the symbol represents scholastic achievement and most importantly the freedom that we share as Americans. The hand around the torch represents the individual class member striving to meet his or her goals, while the circular wreath symbolizes friendship and the unity of the class of '87. The eternal flame depicts the spirit of our class and the fact that the memories of Tech will live with us forever. The logo will be our mark on campus in the form of a pin and a sticker, so display it with the pride of the Class

Balfour Company History

Lloyd G. Balfour recognized a need in 1913 to provide high quality fraternity and sorority jewelry to a market that had been receiving inconsistent quality and delivery by small, local manufacturers.

From that modest beginning, the Balfour Company has become one of the largest providers of emblematic jewelry in the world. Yet through seventy years of business, expansion of product lines, and the training and development of three generations of skilled craftsmen, we have maintained that standard of high quality first set by Mr. Balfour in 1913.

The ability to maintain a standard of high quality is aided by Balfour's unique standing as a privately-owned, international company. Due to our singular situation, we can dedicate our exceptional design capabilities and craftsmanship to the production of the finest quality class rings available and not to the production of dividends for stockholders. Also as our financial strength increased over the years, a substantial portion of our profits has been returned to the company in the form of technological improvements, such as our state-of-the-art CAD/CAM equipment and our refinery.

Your class ring will be crafted at our main facility in Attleboro. Massachusetts, site of our corporate headquarters.

We can assure you that Balfour will take as much pride in the making of your class ring as you will in wearing it.

This is our commitment to you.

M The Class Ring Bezel The bezel of the 1987 Class Ring is a contemporary design with a touch of tradition. For the first time, "VIRGINIA TECH" is spelled on the bezel of the men's traditional ring, which reflects the progressive trend here at Tech. This new look is linked to "VPISU" by two stars, anuary '86 which represent our lifetime goal to "shoot Basketball for the stars." The University Shield New Year's Day James Madison serves as the traditional honor point and provides a way to personalize the ring. 9 This shield can hold initials, Greek letters, the "Skipper" cannon, a Dogwood Blossom, the V.T. monogram, a diamond*, a Dimonique™, or a birthstone. Basketball Southern Classes Begin Mississippi (H) The perimeter of the bezel is the traditional 12 13 interlocking chain, symbolizing the unity and 14 15 16 spirit of our class. The space under the honor Basketball (A) point issues a challenge to each individual to be James Madison the "missing link" in the chain of class unity. This unique design ORDER ORDER TAKING TAKING

Women's Dinner Rings

For the first time in Virginia Tech's history the ring committee is proud to offer two styles of dinner rings to the female members of the Class of 1987. These rings were carefully designed specifically for those class members who desire a ring which will be more than just a symbol of the vears spent at Tech. These rings have a classic look — one which will withstand the changing lifestyles of the individual and be as appropriate to wear twenty years from graduation as they are now.

The committee chose to break tradition and offer two styles simply because we realize that each pair of hands is different from the next. To accommodate these differences we first designed the pear shaped ring for females who desired a ring which would accent long, slender fingers. This ring is gracefully styled with soft contours and curves. It possesses one large stone and two smaller stones which can be selected from a large variety of high quality stones. Written delicately on the sides of the ring are the school name and the graduating year.

The second ring was designed by the members of the committee to complement those females with petite hands. This ring contains three stones geometrically placed in a rectangular setting. Again the stones can be chosen from a large variety, thus allowing the individual to personalize her ring to her own tastes. Adorning the sides of the ring are the school name and graduating year.

We hope that through our efforts we have provided the female members of the class the opportunity and desire to purchase one of these rings as a lasting symbol which will embody the many memories of the years spent at Virginia Tech.

The Torch Lit

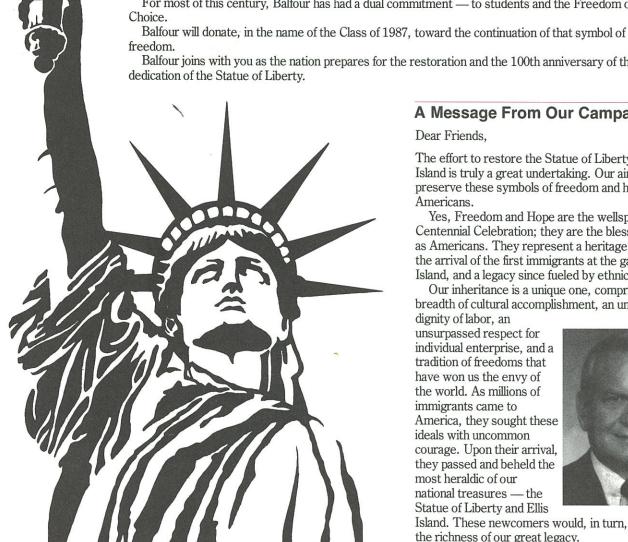

The L.G. Balfour Company is proud to join with the Class of 1987 in helping to "Save the Lady." More than 110 years ago, when France chose Frederic Auguste Bartholdi to create a gift to America to commemorate the 100th anniversary of our independence they turned to young people for support.

The young people of France and the United States contributed much of the money needed to assemble the Statue on Liberty Island.

For them, and for all generations, that statue has become the symbol of freedom.

For most of this century, Balfour has had a dual commitment — to students and the Freedom of Choice.

Balfour joins with you as the nation prepares for the restoration and the 100th anniversary of the

A Message From Our Campaign Chairman

Dear Friends,

The effort to restore the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island is truly a great undertaking. Our aim is to preserve these symbols of freedom and hope for all Americans.

Yes, Freedom and Hope are the wellsprings of our Centennial Celebration; they are the blessings we claim as Americans. They represent a heritage that precedes the arrival of the first immigrants at the gates of Ellis Island, and a legacy since fueled by ethnic diversity.

Our inheritance is a unique one, comprised of a breadth of cultural accomplishment, an unequaled dignity of labor, an unsurpassed respect for individual enterprise, and a tradition of freedoms that have won us the envy of the world. As millions of immigrants came to America, they sought these ideals with uncommon courage. Upon their arrival, they passed and beheld the most heraldic of our national treasures — the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island. These newcomers would, in turn, add to the richness of our great legacy.

My own parents were among the seventeen million immigrants who passed through Ellis Island seeking freedom and opportunity in the new world. In fact, nearly half of all Americans today can trace their roots to a family member who arrived at Ellis Island. Now, we've got the chance to pay homage to the continuing greatness of America; her traditions and values. What better way to reaffirm our confidence in the future than by rebuilding the monument that has best symbolized that confidence in the past! All Americans can honor the memory of those who accomplished so much then by contributing now to the effort to restore the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island. These are the symbols that link the tradition of freedom with the pursuit of opportunity. By preserving them we foster the crowning spirit and rekindle hope for generations

I hope each and every American will join in this tribute and celebration of our nation's heritage.

Lee A. Iacocca
